Brides wed to the idea of getting hitched in the heart of Buckhead have a new spot to consider. Nestled in the hip Andrews District of Buckhead Village, 56 East is an industrial-chic event space that marries exposed ceilings with whitewashed and brick walls. With its own stage area perfect for your band, the 3,800-square-foot space can accommodate up to 50 guests in the pre-function cocktail area, and either 350 standing or 120 seated in the wide-open gallery. Mention The Atlantan Brides and receive a Champagne Cocktail Party, on the house, for up to 100 guests with your reservation. Cheers! *56 E. "Brides are requesting a lot of monochromatic, bright and bold bouquets. And not just flowers—herbs and succulents, too. Lots of texture!"

"For centuries, food has been the great equalizer. We are doing long, dramatic, banquet-style tables with white-gloved butlers placing platters of succulent meats, roasted vegetables and earthy side dishes in the center of the table, instructing guests to help themselves. It promotes conversation and camaraderie."

"I'm finding that my couples are looking for different traditions to incorporate into their wedding ceremony. One popular choice has been the Wine Box Ceremony: prior to the wedding day, the bride and groom write love letters to one another expressing the reasons they fell in love. During the ceremony, the officiant shares with the guests the meaning behind the 'wine box.' Then, with everyone witnessing, the bride and groom place their letters in the box along with their favorite bottle of wine. The box is then sealed shut and not to be opened until a special wedding anniversary, or if they hit a rocky patch in their relationship. At that point, the couple opens it and reads the letters to remind themselves of the reasons why they love each other—and uncork the wine!"
